

In order for translation to occur, the tRNA molecules must be "charged" with the amino acid appropriate for its anti-codon. The enzyme that covalently links the amino acid with its cognate tRNA is called an amino-acyl tRNA synthetase, or charging enzyme.

